No news on this but PCO seems to think it may require senior level discussions to not go forward. In the meantime, we've been advised that Ministers Blair and Mendicino will do a media availability tomorrow at 1pm.

First meeting was chaired by us – so there was better control, and we cut it off (which is what got us into hot water because we only got to 6 Qs).
2nd brief was bananas – and Justice is at fault.

I like Talal's thinking, especially in light of the fact that the neither briefing seems to have had anyone managing it from PCO or PMO. We can't be technical experts and chair the sessions, and somebody has to establish order. If there's another verbal brief, a primary condition is that it's chaired by someone. And Dom has better things to do.

Sorry to jump in so quickly, I obviously would leave it to Rob and Dom but it is not clear to me why won't we take their written questions and send them a response.

Officials are managing a crisis and these briefings take a lot of time and effort.

My two cents.

Subject: Part 2 anyone?

Importance: High

Dom and Colleagues,

I wish I had better news but in light of the fact that there were so many media on the tech briefing this afternoon (see list in attachment) and not enough time for all the questions given the MP briefing, the centre is of the view that we need a second briefing tomorrow. On the plus side, PCO felt it went well – just too many reporters for the time we had allocated for Qs.

I have pitched to PCO that we frame this as a Part 2 where we literally pick up where we left off – Dom can say a few introductory marks to welcome people back and explain that we are opening up for questions given the numbers on the call and lack of time yesterday (we can draft a para or 2 and have it translated for you Dom), and then we launch back into questions. Jean was on board with this and will pitch it to the Centre.

No time yet but 11am is a strong possibility.

Will keep you posted as I hear more.
